The Voice of Real Estate

The Value of a REALTOR®

REALTORS® in Idaho and the NAR work to protect private property rights

You could have many systems in place to protect your home, ranging from dogs, cats, locks, laser security systems, traps (Lego floor mines), cameras and an assortment of other security features. But who is protecting the land that your home sits on?

For 70 years, Idaho REALTORS® have done more than just real estate transactions. Both here at home, and on a national level, REALTORS® are looking out for your property and everything on it. As the largest trade association in the nation and one of the most politically active organizations, the National Association of REALTORS® makes their presence known in government affairs and fights to ensure your rights are not infringed on.

That sounds great, but how are they getting it done, you ask? REALTORS® in Idaho and across the country are part of a collaborative call to action system. If a topic comes up at a local, state or national level that could negatively affect property rights, a call to action is put in place and thousands of REALTORS® are put into action. That could mean calling or writing government officials, voting a certain way, being present at a certain town hall meeting or any number of things. REALTORS® also have dedicated political directors across the country in local and national positions whose main purpose is to keep an eye on Congress and anything property related.

Whew, that's a lot! Who pays for all of that? REALTORS® do! They voluntarily contribute their own money to the REALTOR® Political Action Committee (RPAC). REALTORS® know the importance of your property rights and the effect RPAC has in protecting those rights. Your local REALTORS® volunteer many hours of their own time to RPAC fundraisers and working on city councils, local schools, civic groups and much more. So, you keep protecting your home and feel safe knowing REALTORS® are fighting to protect your property.
